The 12 Laws of Democracy and Pluralism

An online course conducted on twelve consecutive Mondays:
Starting July 11th, 10:00 -11:30 am EST. Fees $250.00 (Need based scholarships available).

MetaCulture, founded in 2005, is committed to strengthening the culture of pluralistic and democratic societies by developing an understanding of how complex systems work and critical thinking.

This course is a radical way of viewing democracy from a historic and global perspective. It will seek to show a difficult, but positive path, for societies that are willing to do the hard work of recovering their democratic ways. It is obvious that we live in dangerous times:

- The rising threat of collapsing ecological, economic, political, and social systems.
- China and global authoritarianism shaking up the liberal world-order and the West.
- Tenuousness, fragility of pluralistic democracies such as the USA, UK, France, India etc.
- Weakening of multilateral institutions and its implications for democracy.
- Destabilizing effects of digital technology and social media for freedom and rights.
- Growth of identity politics and the breakdown of a common vision for society.

The course is a reality check for those who care about democracy. It will explore the following:

I. Natural laws that govern the rise and fall of systems (including political systems), and the complex forces acting upon our fast-changing world.

II. The 12 Laws of Democracy and Pluralism and how we need to recalibrate our individual and social behaviors.

III. What we need to do urgently and measures we must take urgently if we are to prevent further democratic erosion and collapse.
